If you’re ready to explore the Southern Trove, consider this your treasure map. There are four distinct regions: D’ENTRECASTEAUX CHANNEL, BRUNY ISLAND, HUON VALLEY and the FAR SOUTH. This user-friendly guide has colour-coded chapters to showcase each region. Flip to the centre [page 24] and you’ll find a touring map of the entire southern region.

Just a 10 minute drive from Hobart, the Southern Trove is within easy reach for a day of exploration. Those who take their time though, and stay overnight, are rewarded with unexpected finds. Days can be lost in these parts. Create your own southern adventure where World Heritage Wilderness mixes with world-class fare, and tree-lined country roads meet hidden bays.

There are local stories, snap-worthy vistas and fine accommodation options to uncover. This is a place where memories are made.

Explore the Southern Trove

Waterways and Wilderness

As Tasmania’s most southern region, the Southern Trove is wild. After all, the next stop is Antarctica. World Heritage Wilderness and sheltered waterways invite exploration on foot and by boat. Settlements hug the coastline where livelihoods are carved out through industries including fishing, aquaculture and tourism.

Back in 1792 when Bruni D’Entrecasteaux sought solace from the Roaring Forties, he took shelter in The Channel’s protected coves and bays. This expanse of water between Bruny Island and Tasmania’s mainland offers smooth cruising waters and the coastal drive is one of Australia’s best kept touring secrets. Dotted with seaside towns like Kettering, Margate and Woodbridge, cast a line or find a hidden cove to picnic. Follow D’Entrecasteaux’s lead.

Bruny Island has often been referred to as a microcosm of Tasmania. This island off an island off an island is packed with wilderness experiences, incredible food, and opportunities to enjoy the water. There are extensive bush and coastal walking tracks, stretching far into South Bruny National Park and along windswept beaches. Rare wildlife including albino wallabies and the world’s largest population of the endangered Forty-Spotted Pardalote call Bruny home.

In the Huon Valley, the Huon River has its beginnings in Southwest National Park’s rugged wilderness. With its flow comes superb fly fishing, on-water activities and tales untold at the historic boating township of Franklin.

Been to the Far South? It’s only an hour from Hobart. It’s where the mountains and forest meet the Great Southern Ocean. Flanked to the west by the rugged world of Southwest National Park, the Far South also has many sheltered, quiet bays and beaches along its eastern side. Walk a deserted beach, fish for your dinner, conquer a summit or sit with the stillness. Dover is an ideal base – the gateway township to the Southwest National Park.

History and Heritage

The Southern Trove has been shaped by a rich history of whaling, timber cutting, boat building and fruit growing. Journey to Cockle Creek to learn of the Far South’s rich history. It sits on the edge of the Southwest National Park and is literally the end of the road. You can drive no further south in Australia.

It was once a settlement with over 2000 residents. Explore the area’s Aboriginal sites, abandoned tramways, whaling stories, gravestones and ruins.

The first Europeans to set eyes on the Huon River were the crew commanded by Admiral Bruni d’Entrecasteaux. The river was named by him in honour of his second in command, Captain Huon de Kermadec. The name is preserved today with a town, river, and the district all bearing the Huon title.

The Huon Valley is well known as one of Tasmania’s primary apple growing areas. Sample organic ciders made from the valley’s bounty and pick up crisp, freshly picked apples from roadside stalls. These days, it’s not just about apples though. Cherries, small-scale distilleries and aquaculture are emerging economic drivers for the region.

The valley also has a proud boat building heritage that continues on Franklin’s waterfront. At the Wooden Boat Centre, not only can you delve into the maritime past, but the school also offers courses in handmade boat building. Further south in Geeveston are stories of the forestry industry, dating back to early colonisation.

Tastes of the Trove

Cellar doors, artisan cheese makers, boutique breweries and quality cider producers. These are just some of the Southern Trove’s flavours. A strong reputation in viticulture has now expanded to regionally produced cider, beer and spirits. A tasting journey might include liqueur tastings, plump cherries from a farm gate and delicate croissants from a wood-fired bakery.

With a temperate climate, four distinct seasons and good rainfall, there’s little wonder diverse agriculture flourishes here. The area has always been famous for its apple industry. But a visit today rewards with a list that stretches across fine seafood, distilleries, stone and berry fruits, vineyards, mushrooms, saffron and grass-fed beef.

Some of the larger wineries are ideal for that long lazy lunch in the countryside. There’s also an abundance of quality cider producers, some families having been orchardists for up to four generations. Many have reinvented themselves, tending to the thirst of those acquainted with Tassie organic cider.

Not only are apples used in making these refreshing drops – pears, cherries and even quinces enhance the flavour profile.

Local producers busy themselves preparing premium products including soft cheese, wine, chocolate, bread, bush food, locally-pressed olive oil, ice cream, yoghurt and more – all easily enjoyed at events, eateries and local markets.

When talented chefs have access to this produce, you can be sure that tasting your way through the Trove is a treat. For the foragers, collect your produce along the way and prepare a private feast at your accommodation by night.
Activities

BOATING AROUND THE SOUTHERN TROVE

It’s a boat enthusiast’s utopia – nearly every Southern Trove township sits on the edge of the Huon River or D’Entrecasteaux Channel. That means the distance between boat and water is never far. Jetties and boat ramps are as common as locals with tall fisherman’s tales. Sheltered bays provide overnight refuge, catamarans from Hobart offer lunch escapes down The Channel and marina facilities are available at Margate, Kettering, Franklin and Port Huon.

For locations of boat ramps and an array of on-water experiences, please visit southerntrove.com.au

CYCLING ALONG THE SOUTHERN TROVE

Whether you’re a mountain bike buff seeking southern hillsides or an adventure tourer circumnavigating Tasmania, the Southern Trove is made for two wheels.

Shorter expeditions might include a cycle loop around the Cygnet Coast Road with superb Huon River views, the Esperance Coast Road from Dover to Police Point with some short, steep undulations or a 7km pedal from Dover to Roaring Beach. For the more ambitious, take in the whole Trove on a 240km self-guided tour.

Don’t have your own bike? Pick up a hire bike from Huon Valley Bicycle Hire in Wilmot Road. There is a network of backroads weaving through Ranelagh, Lucaston, Crabtree and Mountain River to explore.

LEAVE NO TRACE!

Leave no trace is an internationally accepted way of minimising impacts on the places we visit. You can do your bit by following these seven principles:

- plan ahead and prepare
- walk and camp on durable surfaces
- dispose of waste properly – take out what you take in
- leave what you find
- minimise campfire impacts – use a fuel stove
- respect wildlife
- be considerate of your hosts and other visitors.

D’ENTRECASTEAUX CHANNEL

The gateway to the Southern Trove.

Known to locals as ‘The Channel’, the D’Entrecasteaux Channel was first discovered by French navigator Bruni D’Entrecasteaux whilst seeking reprieve from the ferocious Roaring Forties. Those secret coves and protected bays Bruni happened across in 1792, are yours to enjoy today.

Just 10 minutes from Hobart, the Channel Highway winds south along the coast and is considered one of Australia’s great (yet lesser known) coastal drives. Peppered along the way are seaside towns of Margate, Snug and Kettering, the gateway to Bruny Island. Further along are Woodbridge, Birchs Bay, Middleton and right round the coast road you’ll find Cygnet.

Drop in to Cygnet for a bite or take a dip on a warm summer’s day. There are local artisan markets, petite cafes and the likes of Eggs and Bacon Bay to discover. A high road through to the Huon Valley (Woodbridge Hill Road) offers a fresh perspective as it ambles through orchards and farmland. From here, the outlook reaches across boats on the Huon estuary to the Tasmanian Wilderness World Heritage Area beyond.

insider tips

• Snug Falls is a pleasant one hour return walk from the Snug township. Head there after a heavy rain for spectacular falls!
• Visit the local Art Farm
• Watch sheep whey spirits being made
• Take a cruise down the D’Entrecasteaux Channel

BRUNY ISLAND

Island hop to Bruny.

Bruny Island is just a 45 minute drive and short ferry ride from Hobart’s CBD, yet feels a world away. The petite island packs in stunning coastlines, spectacular walks and a bounty of produce and rare wildlife. Think albino wallabies and fleeting Swift Parrots.

There’s good reason locals frequent Bruny. They island-hop for the secluded beaches, thick-forested walks and uncrowded, laid back feel. Split by The Neck where Little Penguins nest, North and South Bruny are richly diverse. Head south for the towering rainforests of South Bruny National Park, where Cape Bruny Lighthouse (circa 1838) warns distant sailors of the island’s presence. Or venture north where sprawling pastures and light bushland wrap around the townships of Dennes Point and Great Bay.

Take a cruise along Bruny’s coastline to get up close to resident fur seals, seabirds and migrating whales if you’re lucky. Back on land, taste your way through an abundant blend of fresh oysters, wine, berries, handcrafted fudge, cheese and island brews.

insider tips

• Catch a sunrise or sunset from the top of the Neck
• Watch Penguins come in to nest
• If you’re keen to spot a white wallaby, down around Adventure Bay you might just get lucky!

Let’s keep the Southern Trove a beautiful place!
HUON VALLEY

The enchanting Huon.

The rolling hills of the Huon Valley are just a 30 minute commute south of Hobart. Follow the bends to a lush valley – where vines and stone fruits and apples thrive. The region is known for its creative community, its generational fruit growers and freshly-picked produce.

From roadside stalls and award-winning Pinot to artist studios tucked down laneways, discover it slowly. Sip slowly. Take your cider with a side of apple heritage. Mix your seasonal berries with maritime heritage.

In the heart of the valley is Huonville, the last major southern township. Surrounded by orchards and World Heritage Area peaks, it’s also a popular haunt for second-hand enthusiasts. About 15 minutes from Huonville, is Cygnet. This town has drawn makers, designers and those seeking a gentler pace for decades. There are galleries, affable locals, an off-grid baker and riverside picnic coves to happen upon.

From Huonville, cross the bridge and you’re en route to Franklin, one of the world’s last refuges for the craft of wooden boat building. Forge on to the southern edge of the valley and you’ll come across the township of Geeveston, rich with pioneer heritage of logging days gone by. Geeveston is your gateway to the wonderful temperate rainforests of the Far South.

insider tips

• Plan your trip around a valley event. Find yourself amid an ancient pagan ritual or moving to the tune of folksy beats!
• Enjoy the seasons and its bounty – take a drive through the Huon Valley and explore local shops, cafés and wares.
• Pick up some local goods from producers and take it back to your accommodation to enjoy in the evening.
• Keep your eyes out for roadside stalls and honesty boxes.

Picnic in the Huon Valley
The name is fitting, but it's only an hour South of Hobart! In Tasmania's Far South, you'll find yourself far from the madding crowd. It's a place where nature is raw, wild and untamed. Here, the air is some of the purest on Earth. Cool deep waters of the Southern Ocean compete for your attention with warm thermal springs. Dolomite caves create nature's cathedrals below ground, while above, temperate rainforests invite wandering and wonder. The forests give up their secret solitude to those willing to take time on two feet. Deep bays of the coast shelter the seaside towns of Dover and Southport.

Here, fishermen harvest the Southern Ocean's bountiful crayfish, oysters and salmon that will find their way to restaurant plates worldwide. Down this way pristine beaches stretch out, often without another soul to be seen. The power of nature calls surfers to secret breaks. For the adventurous, Cockle Creek is the beginning of a trail that leads to South Cape Bay. It's about four hours return along unspoilt coastline. Take the track and you'll feel like you've literally walked to the world's edge.

insider tips
- Head for the bronze whale sculpture at Cockle Creek and imagine a time when 2000 early settlers, including sealers, whalers and convicts called Cockle Creek home
- Watch a sunrise over the Dover Bay
- Take the kids to Geeveston to play on an awesome playground, or your furbaby to the dog park nearby
- Visit large scale public art installations in the region
- Plan a weekend around one of the many spectacular walks in the region

Driving is a great way to explore everything Tasmania has to offer, but there are some essential rules you must follow to keep you and your passengers safe.

Always drive on the left side of the road.

Driver and passengers must wear a seatbelt at all times.

Never use a mobile phone while driving.

Slow down and look out for animals on the road, especially at dawn and dusk.

Pull off the road when stopping to take photos, enjoy scenery or read maps.

Slow down on winding, gravel or icy roads in bad weather.

You must obey speed limits. In poor conditions, drive slower than the limit.

Hazard markers warn that the road ahead is about to change direction.

Everything you need to know about driving safely in Tasmania is on our website. Visit rsac.tas.gov.au/visitingdrivers before you drive.
